

The Cognitive Science Society, Inc.

Publication Agreement

The undersigned authors agree that the manuscript entitled The semantic drift of quotations in blogspace: a case study in short-term cultural evolution having been accepted for publication in the journal Cognitive Science, or topiCS, is now the property of the Cognitive Science Society, Inc. Specifically, the author(s) transfer(s) to the Society the exclusive rights comprised in the copyright of said manuscript, except that the author(s) retain(s) the following:

- 1) All proprietary rights, other than copyright.
- 2) The right to make oral presentations of the material.
- 3) The right to use, after publication, all or part of the material in any book authored or edited by the author(s).
- 4) Authors are entitled to distribute copies of the article for personal use, either on paper or electronically, through their own personal mailing or website, or through the website of an agency by which they are employed, but permission of the Cognitive Science Society is required to reproduce published papers in other sources, including electronic archives.

It is understood, in relation to Item 4, that the author(s) is/are required to obtain permission in writing from the Cognitive Science Society for all or a substantial part of the article to be reproduced for distribution by a commercial publisher or an agency in which the author(s) is/are not employed.

In the case of works prepared by employees or contractors of the U.S. Government, the U.S. Government will retain a non-exclusive, royalty-free license to use any or all of the material for any government purpose.

The author(s) warrant(s) that the manuscript is the original work of the author(s), contains no libelous or unlawful statements, and does not infringe any legal rights of any other party. In the case of an employee work for hire, both the author and a representative authorized to bind the owner of the work have signed below.

Cognitive Science and topiCS prefer all co-authors of jointly authored papers to sign the copyright transfer. In the event where only the principle co-author signs, Cognitive Science and topiCS will assume that the signing co-author does so with the authorization of the remaining co-author(s).

Intending to be legally bound, and understanding that the Society will grant specific license for republication of this manuscript without charge when agreed to by the authors and upon written request of the prospective licensee, the author(s) has/have subscribed below.

February 4, 2017. Hecol	SÉBASTIEN LERIQUE	CAMS (UMR 8557) CNRS-EHESS, 150-158 av. de France, 75013 PARIS
Author's Signature & Date	Printed Name	Institution or Organization

_____ Author's Signature & Date	_____ Printed Name	_____ Institution or Organization
------------------------------------	-----------------------	--------------------------------------

Author's Signature & Date

Printed Name

Institution or Organization

Author's Signature & Date

Printed Name

Institution or Organization

Return this form to: Caroline Verdier, Cognitive Science Program, Indiana University, Eigenmann 812, 1901 E. 10th St., Bloomington IN 47406-7512, USA. It can also be faxed to Caroline Verdier at 1-812-855-1086.

In response to a request for a study in short-term cultural evolution having been accepted for publication in the journal Cognitive Science, or report, is now the property of the Cognitive Science Society, Inc. Specifically, the author(s) transfer(s) to the Society the exclusive rights contained in the copyright of said manuscript, except that the author(s) retain(s) the following:

- (1) All proprietary rights, other than copyright.
- (2) The right to make oral presentations of the material.
- (3) The right to use, after publication, all or part of the material in any book, manuscript or edited by the author(s).
- (4) Author(s) are entitled to distribute copies of the article for personal use, either on paper or electronically, through their own personal mailing or website, or through the website of an agency by which they are employed, but permission of the Cognitive Science Society is required in response published papers in other sources, including electronic archives.

It is understood, in relation to item 4, that the author(s) have(s) required to obtain permission in writing from the Cognitive Science Society for all or a substantial part of the article to be reproduced for distribution by a commercial publisher or an agency in which the author(s) have(s) been employed.

In the case of works prepared by employees or contractors of the U.S. Government, the U.S. Government will retain a non-exclusive, royalty-free license to use any or all of the material for any government purpose.

The author(s) warrant(s) that the manuscript is the original work of the author(s), contains no libel or unlawful statements, and does not infringe any legal rights of any other party. In the case of an exclusive work for hire, both the author and a representative authorized to bind the owner of the work have signed below.

Cognitive Science and topic 2 prefer all co-author or jointly authored papers to sign the copyright transfer. In the event where only the principle co-author signs, Cognitive Science and topic 2 will assume that the signing co-author does so with the authorization of the remaining co-author(s).

Intending to be legally bound, and understanding that the Society will grant specific license for reproduction of this manuscript without charge when agreed to by the author(s) and upon written request of the prospective licensee, the author(s) have(s) submitted below:

Caroline Verdier (2007)

1-812-855-1086

55 EAST 10TH STREET

February 4, 2007

Institution or Organization

Printed Name

Author's Signature & Date

Institution or Organization

Printed Name

Author's Signature & Date